THE POWER OF THE EYE

The scientific world has been set aging by a new discovery. Theorem cally this discovery may not be so important as the famous Einstein theory of relativity, but its practical application to life is more ap-If seems that one Dr. parent If neems that one Dr. Charles Russ, eminent British bac-teriologist, through perfecting an instrument by which it can be measured has proved that the human eye is expable of producing movement; that a glance from the eye has motive power

To the scientist the significance of the discovery lim in the fact that this motive power can now be dis tinetly measured by having the eye est in motion a delicate instrument. from which motion the power of a glance can be measured. The practical man has long be-Heved in the idea that the eye had some power other than that of merely registering which goes on in the material world about it. Although he has had no instrument to measure precisely the amount of power thus given off he has gather ed numerakable evidence of it is his school days, when a glance from the teacher cent him flying from the
